Remember, though, that this exception applies only to unreal conditionals—that is, situations that do not reflect reality. (Hint: unreal conditionals often contain words like “would” or “ought to.”) When you’re talking about a possibility that did happen or might be true, use “was” and “were” as you normally would.

“Was” or “Were” in the “If” Clause/Conditional | Grammarly

So in addition to “if you were” and “if they were”, the phrases “if I were” and “if he/she/it were” are also correct. So, short answer, they're both right in this case, because the usage of "was/were" as the past participle is both in the second conditional and in the past simple passive.
